News from YEDA-Leo Baeck, Petach Tikvah

In our YEDA Petach Tikvah School's effort to strengthen students' Hebrew language skills, we are progressing by improving their ability to express themselves, present a topic, and appear before a student audience at the school.

This year we initiated a new project in which students in higher grades give a lesson on a specific topic to lower grade students, conduct a class discussion about it, answer questions, and give writing assignments. The lesson is given following preparation of the older student by the teacher who specializes in the subject.

This week a sixth grade student gave a lesson on the North Pole and global warming to students in the second grade. The students were very interested in the topic, expanded their vocabulary, and even prepared written assignments given by their young teacher, based on their study of the subject.

Everyone enjoyed the lesson and participation was exemplary. We will continue this program throughout the year.
